

Sioux Chief Adds New American-Made 'Top Plate Connector' to Product Line for Plumbing Contractors

New domestic top plate connectors are zinc or copper plated, BAA and ARRA compliant, and are now in stock and ready to ship.

Kansas City, Missouri - March 26, 2013 – Kansas City-based rough plumbing manufacturer, Sioux Chief, announced the addition of its domestic 541 Top Plate Connector specified for use in suspending or supporting 3/8" threaded rod for supporting CTS or IPS piping installations in accordance with national code requirements.

The new domestic top plate connectors are stamped from 13 gauge galvanized steel with two finishes available: zinc-plated or copper-plated, both featuring a heavy-duty 3/8"-16 UNC captured nut.

"Contractors needing BAA or ARRA compliant products will be pleased with these items," said Sioux Chief product group director, Carol Flanagan.

"Contractors use Top Plate Connectors to suspend Sioux Chief's all-new PowerBar Mini Strut or standard clevis hangers from overhead. Top Plate Connectors are also ideal to fasten directly to walls in mechanical rooms to position pipe runs at any distance from the wall using split ring hangers."

Top Plate Connectors may be secured to a wood, steel or concrete structure using two approved fasteners.

Updated Specification sheets are available.

Sioux Chief products are sold through wholesale plumbing distributors nationwide.
